CENSUS BUREAU TO BEGIN 'ADDRESS CANVASSING'

In the coming weeks, residents may begin seeing Census Bureau workers in their neighborhoods as they begin a process called "Address Canvassing." Through Address Canvassing, the Census Bureau is able to validate, add, correct and delete addresses in their database in preparation for mailing 2020 Census information.

Census Bureau employees are not required to have a City solicitors permit, but they will have an official Census ID card with the employee's name, picture and an expiration date. They will also have a black canvas bag and a laptop with a Census Bureau logo on the top.

Address canvassers will NOT be asking information about individuals at this time, but rather about addresses and habitable locations.

If residents have concerns about canvassers, they are asked to call 9-1-1- and an officer can respond to help verify identities.
